SPECIAL FEATURES OF CHRISTMAS IN HONOLULU

Christmas Day dawned upon Honolulu bright and sunny after the discouraging rain storm of the day and night previous and with the change in the elements came a change in the spirits of all. Services were held in several churches, in all of which special music was a feature, the interiors of the edifices being decorated with greens and flowers.

At Central Union church the services were held at 11 a. m., where some excellent music was rendered, the program being as follows: Anthem, "Te Deum" (Festival in C). Dudley Buck; offertory solo, "Noel" (Gounod). Mrs. A. H. Otis; anthem, "Glory to God on High" (Mozart). Mrs. J. W. Yarnley and choir.

Rev. J. P. Erdman occupied the pulpit in place of Rev. W. M. Kincaid, and delivered the Christmas sermon. He spoke, in part, as follows:

The Lord Jesus is Immanuel—"God with us"—in a very real sense. It is in Him, and Him alone, that we find our Heavenly Father revealed to us. In all ages and among all peoples there has appeared an eager longing for some God in whom one might put trust and faith. This quest has been the dominating motive of multitudes. It has not been simply an intellectual and speculative search, but much more than that. It has been a search for something to satisfy the whole nature, for some God to meet personal needs. It has been a search for the Father of their spirits. So simple, yet true, utterance of this longing was ever spoken that the heart-felt cry of the psalmist, "My soul is a thirst for God, for the living God."

This omnipresent desire has been the formative impulse of every religion, pagan and Christian. But though some persons have reached the high toward which they have failed to find the true God because they have not known Christ. For in Him alone is the true Father discovered.

Men have examined nature, the material world about them and have searched her through and through in the vain endeavor to find a God to satisfy the cry of their souls. But failure has been their reward. Nature tells only of great forces, impersonal and unconscious. These seem indifferent to, and often-times opposed to, man to his desires and hopes. Though in some aspects nature is beautiful and gracious, in others she is cruel and merciless, throwing aside without concern some of her noblest works. Nature does not meet but even seems to mock our quest with her baffling enigmas, as Tennyson has put it:—"I bring to life, I bring to death, I know no more."

If we turn to history, to that sphere where human activity and human intelligence have had play, shall we not find an answer to our soul's desire? But history is only a disappointing and confused murmur of voices. There may be advancement from age to age, but it has no intelligent answer for us. History may be a drama, men and women the actors. But if we leave nature and history and turn to our own inner consciousness, surely here we shall find the "living God." Yet on examination we discover that even the law of conscience, though commanding obedience, says no more than that there is a moral personality who was the lawgiver. It is scarcely more than a law of life, making for righteousness. So neither in nature nor history nor conscience do we find our "living God." Behind all these impersonal principles and forces our souls still seek the Father of our spirits.

It is only when we come to Christ Jesus as revealed in the Gospel that the Heavenly Father is brought near us. When Jesus said that "No man knoweth the Father except the Son, or he to whom the Son will reveal him." He spoke an eternal truth and made known the only way by which the soul's thirst for the "living God" can be quenched.

AT ST. CLEMENTS.

The Christmas services at St. Clement's chapel were very beautiful and well attended. The Holy Communion was celebrated at seven in the morning, and again at half-past ten, after morning prayer. The offertory, which amounted to $4.85 will be devoted towards the erection of the new school-room.

A very handsome solid silver communion service was dedicated and used for the first time. The chapel was very prettily decorated with holly and spruce, which had been sent from Vancouver, and reminded many in the congregation of the old Christmas in England. The music was of the best. The service commenced by a voluntary on the organ, accompanied on the violin by Mr. Love, who played with great taste. This was followed by several Christmas carols, the first of which was "Noel," composed by Edgar Newcomb, Esq., of this city. The Te Deum and the anthem were very fine and excellently rendered. The service was choral throughout.

A very beautiful illumination over the east window was executed and presented by Viggo Jacobson, Esq. This will be left as a permanent decoration. Had the weather been fine St. Clement's would have been taxed beyond its seating capacity. The music will be repeated on Sunday and the decorations will not wither for a week or two. Rev. Mr. Osborne makes a practice of not preaching on Christmas Day, further than to invoke the blessings of God upon his people for their joyful season and the New Year.

Mr. Osborne was as much surprised as he was gratified at being presented by the Women's Guild with a very handsome casket made of the heaviest and richest silk. No offering could have been made by this thoughtful Guild that would have been more appreciated by him.

THE SECOND CONGREGATION.

Rev. Alexander Mackintosh, pastor of the Second Congregation of St. Andrew's Cathedral, was assisted in the Christmas services at 5 p. m., by Rev. Mr. Hooker of Montana. At the 9:30 o'clock service, a splendid musical program was rendered by an augmented choir of twenty-six voices. The choir, "Hymn of the Nativity," was rendered by Mrs. C. B. Cooper, violin, J. Tain McGrew, piano, and Wray Taylor, organ. The solo part of the anthem, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," was beautifully sung by Mrs. E. D. Tenny, assisted by the choir. David's Te Deum was rendered by sixteen male voices.

Clifford Kimball sustaining the tenor solo parts in a pleasing manner. Mrs. Cooper sang the solo parts in the Jubilate. Arthur Wall's tenor, and T. Clive Davies' bass harmonized splendidly in the anthem from "The Nativity." The Christmas sermon was preached by Rev. Alexander Mackintosh.

Bishop Willis' congregation held Christmas services in the Cathedral at 11 o'clock, a large surpliced choir rendering the special music. Rev. V. H. Kitecat intoned the service, assisted by Rev. F. Fitz. Bishop Willis preached the sermon.

ST. LOUIS COLLEGE.

Upon the stage of the St. Louis College theater will be shown to the public tonight marvelous representation of Bethlehem, the surrounding valleys, the scene in the stable where the child Jesus lies in the manger watched by Joseph and Mary, all in miniature. The entire depth and width of the stage, 25 by 25 feet, is used to bring out the details of the various scenes, all of which have been done by the Brothers of the college. Every night from 6 to 9 o'clock for the next two weeks the realistic representation will be on exhibit, and as in former years, will doubtless draw big crowds there. The exhibition is mainly intended for children, but adults will find it as interesting to them as to the young people.

From the footlights to the painted scene at the back of the stage representing views of mountains and lakes and huge buildings erected on eminences, the details of the scenes in and about Bethlehem as described in the Bible, have been faithfully portrayed. When shadows are thrown upon the scene by a skillful arrangement of electric lights, the auditorium being darkened, the peaceful pastoral scenes upon the stage take on a most realistic appearance. Near the footlights a green sward is produced dotted with figures of men, cattle and sheep. A neatly constructed cavern at the left, dimly lighted, depicts the scene of Christ's birth. Mary and Joseph bowing before the child; even the cattle are represented standing in the stalls. In the center of the stage is a deep valley with winding roads leading up precipitous cliffs and mountainous formations. One leads to the gates of Bethlehem, which is perched upon a cliff, the houses skillfully typifying the architecture of that day. Behind are towering mountains. Across the valley, seemingly in the distance, a hill is a windmill, the sails moving lazily around, while just below Bethlehem, is a mill of the ancient times, showing the rude grinding stones revolving. These are turned by a water wheel, a tiny rivulet falling over the wheel and flowing down into a pond. The latter shows shores green with grass, coconuts rising therefrom.

The hills are rugged, the valley green, smooth and peaceful while back in the distance are two shining lakes reflecting in clefts in the mountains. The houses are carved from boards, painted in the distance in a clever manner. The hill formations are skillfully painted and arranged to show the rugged clefts and precipitous sides by an arrangement of chairs and benches, which of course are not seen by the audience.

The entire arrangement is to deceive the eye and also the mind. The children sit open-mouthed feasting upon the scenes and incidents of Bible life which have been taught them from their infancy. As many scenes as possible have been incorporated into the representation so that the children can have them all brought to their attention at once. The most prominent feature of the Christmas season, is, of course, the scene in the "Crib," as the College Brothers term it.

The arrangement of the electric lights at the rear of the stage is made to cast a shadow upon the mountains and lakes there, with just a glimmer of sunlight. Bethlehem then fades away into some darkness, electricity again playing an important part. Lights glimmer through window glass of many hues, the mill is lighted up and the "Crib" is filled with a suffused red glow. Suspended by threads that are invisible to the audience bisque angels hover over the town and the manger scene. Everything is done with a view to implanting in the minds of the children the stories that have been told of the Nativity, and this method has proved quite successful in the past.

Most of the work has been done by the Brothers since the Christmas vacation began last week. Many of them are artists, and these painted the canvases. Some carved the buildings; others fashioned the "hills" and "boulders," and everything has been done in a marvellously short time. However, it is a pleasant work to the Brothers, and knowing that the result will please the children, they enter into the spirit of the thing with their whole hearts.

CHRISTMAS AT Y. M. C. A.

The Christmas dinner of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday was attended by about twenty-five young men, who enjoyed very much the entertainment offered them. The menu was excellent, and the courses were interspersed with patriotic songs.

R. H. Trow acted as toastmaster and responses were made by Secretary H. C. Brown, W. D. Bancroft and John Martin.

A time-honored custom is that of our Young Men's Christian Association keeping open house on the first day of each new year. Dainty invitations have been mailed to over 100 members, inviting them not only to be present, but to bring a young man. Then through the newspapers a general invitation is extended to all the young men of the city. Through the generosity of the good ladies of Honolulu the Association is able to serve, free of charge, a most appetizing lunch after the guests have shaken hands with the directors in the parlor and library between the hours of 12 and 2. At 2 o'clock the gymnasium will offer a few attractions for the athletes, have not partaken too heartily of the lunch. It is hoped that part of the Amateur orchestra will play a few selections during the lunch hour. Mr. John Waters, house and his reception committee have general oversight of the whole affair, assisted by Mr. Wray Taylor of the music committee, Mr. M. A. Clark of the decorating committee, and Secretary Brown of the institutions. The most important item is the lunch, and of course, it takes ladies to make a success of that.

SALVATIONISTS ENTERTAIN.

The Salvation Army's entertainment on Christmas night was a great success. The big rift of the previous day had prevented the use of the special piano, but Prof. Richards brought along a portable organ, which took its place. The Salvationists, in honor of the guests, were dressed up in sailor fashion, and made quite a striking show in the parade and street meeting. The program of the meeting in the hall was a varied one, the constant applause, given by the approval of the big crowd which packed the building. Sergeant-Major Flora Cannon had charge of the juvenile members, and put them through several drills before distributing the presents of toys, books and candy.

Lena Cannon sang a pretty little song and Hazel Gillette gave most effectively a recitation entitled "Christmas in the Poor House." Mr. Lee rendered a number of selections on the phonograph. Miss Hyde sang a beautiful solo accompanied by Mrs. Theodore Richards, and Major Wood brought this part of the proceedings to a close with a good Gospel address on the birthday of Christ, urging all present to let the Christ of Christmas be their friend, Savior and guide through life. The remainder of the evening was spent socially, the ladies and ladies of the Army waiting upon all present with ice cream, cake and fruit.

AT THE JAPANESE CHURCH.

The Christmas celebration of the Sunday School of the Japanese Methodist church, and of the students of the Japanese school on Kukul street, was held last night in the church, corner of Nuuanu and Kukul streets. The edifice was crowded with children and grown folks, there being in the neighborhood of three hundred and fifty or four hundred people present. The interior of the church was prettily decorated with Japanese holiday trimmings, consisting of small tree-branches covered with bits of tinted tissue paper, which were gathered around the pillars and upon the walls, giving the church a brilliant appearance. Near the platform was a Christmas tree, a striking combination of Occidental and Oriental decorations upon its branches, giving it a bizarre effect.

The background for the platform was a scene of the three wise men on their way to the cradle of Christ. The scene was peculiarly Japanese. It was done by a Japanese artist, and was in fact the Japanese interpretation of the historic journey of the three kings. The canvas represented the volcanic peak, Fujiyama, towering in the distance. There was a water and cloud effect and a turnpike in the foreground, upon which were the three wise men, quite Japanese in their aspect. A huge star shed its rays directly upon a Japanese stable, a quaint little thatched affair. It was a novel representation, but thoroughly in accord with Japanese ideas of the birth scene.

The youngest children were seated in the front rows, the older ones behind them, the guests being given seats toward the rear of the hall. Lines of Japanese young men stood three deep around the sides of the hall. An interesting program was gone through, consisting of singing by the choir, recitations by the various classes of the Sunday School, Theological Institute and Kakaiko branch, concluding with the giving of gifts, bags of candy and souvenirs. The pretty hall decorations were taken down when the program was finished and taken to the entrance, where they were distributed to the children and guests as they departed. The exercises were gone through without a hitch, the small boys and girls showing never a tremor as they stood upon the platform before the large audience to recite their pieces.
